RE: MON/AMI RESOURCE LIBRARY

Dear Friends,

The Montana Alliance for the Mentally Ill is happy to offer this updated catalog of library materials for 1994-1995.

MON/AMI is committed to its library project, the MON/AMI Resource Library, in order to educate families, consumers, and the public about mental illness. We work diligently to encourage support, build informed advocacy, promote research and reduce the stigma associated with mental illness.

Videotapes and audio-cassettes may be borrowed for two weeks at a time. Books are due three weeks from check out day. If difficulties are encountered with the resources, please let the library know as soon as possible.

Library resource materials are for educational purposes only and are not to be used commercially.

A rental fee is not charged, but we ask you to pay the return postage on the materials. One way to show appreciation of our efforts, though there is no obligation, is to send a donation to help continue expansion of the resource library. A second way is to join a local group of Alliance for the Mentally Ill. A list of the current AMI groups is available through the library.

Thank you for caring enough to stay informed.

Sincerely yours,

The MON/AMI Library Committee

MON/AMI RESOURCE LIBRARY

DESCRIPTION OF LIBRARY COLLECTION

The MON/AMI Resource Library, a project of Montana Alliance for the Mentally Ill, is a collection of videos, audio-cassettes and books about serious mental illnesses and the people who suffer because of them.

PURPOSE OF LIBRARY

We believe the library is a valuable tool for educating members, the public and professional community -- and especially helpful to new members who learn there is a considerable body of quality, non-technical resources available to help understand mental illnesses and cope with them.

Through this educational commitment, MON/AMI is better able to advance the goals of: advocacy, research, eradication of stigma and, eventually, find a cure for the brain diseases that have caused loved ones such pain.

LIBRARY AUTHORITY AND POLICIES

The dominant authority for resources is the National Alliance for the Mentally Ill (NAMI) Literature Committee and their Annotated Book List. Recommendations come also from AMI's family members and consumers and from professional friends of AMI.

Again, our materials are for educational purposes only and are not to be used commercially.

To request an extension on library materials, (see previous page for due dates) please call MON/AMI Library at 443-7871. We are glad to oblige if no one is waiting for the piece. We appreciate your cooperation with our procedures.

ACKNOWLEDGMENT

The MON/AMI Resource Catalog is printed by the Montana Department of Corrections and Human Services with funding help from the Community Support Program of the National Institute of Mental Health.

DUKE, Patty and Gloria Hochman
A Brilliant Madness,* Bantam Books, 1992

The well-known actress tells the story of her experience with manic depression as a child star to the present. Duke's commitment to advocacy for the mentally ill and educating the public about bipolar disorder has endeared her to AMI members around the United States. Science writer, Hochman, provides alternate chapters of recent research into this brain disorder. 285 pgs.

FIEVE, Dr. Ronald R.
Moodswing: The Third Revolution in Psychiatry,
New York, Bantam Books, 1976

A readable book, that was for many years the only one of its kind. Written by a pioneer in the use of lithium, it presents many case studies to illustrate features of the disease. More recently published books deal more comprehensively with the variety of depressive illnesses, the increasing precision of diagnosis, and options in treatment. 244 pgs.

GOODWIN, Frederick K. and Kay Redfield Jamison
Manic Depressive Illness,* New York, Oxford University Press, 1990

A long anticipated landmark book for physicians and scientists by a psychiatrist and clinical psychologist who are world leaders in their field. It is comprehensive, authoritative and readable and will be the leading book on the subject for many years. The authors show great sensitivity to the suffering that accompanies manic-depression. 938 pgs.

KLINE, Nathan, MD
From Sad to Glad, Ballantine Books, 1974

A readable account of clinical depression that cites outstanding individuals who were manic depressive and gives profiles of patients. The book describes the impact of depression, research, brain function, and drug therapies and explains the complexity of matching medication to the patient's biochemistry. More recent books distinguish more clearly between various forms of depression. 214 pgs.

MONDIMORE, Francis M.
Depression: The Mood Disease, Johns Hopkins Press, 1990

Dr. Mondimore offers authoritative and comprehensive evidence that serious depression is a no-fault bio-chemical disorder in lay terms. He also gives an optimistic assessment of future treatments. 225 pgs.

NAMI

Clinical Depression Series, NAMI, 1992, 1993

References, articles and pamphlets, in folder format, dealing individually with clinical depression and the College Student, Young Professional Women, Older Americans and African Americans. Eli Lilly & Co. provided the educational grant.

PAPOLOS, Demitri and Janice Papolos

Overcoming Depression, Harper & Row, 1987

A comprehensive, up-to-date treatment of depression that is clearly organized and easy to manage. It begins with descriptions of the disease, discussions of diagnosis and research, and moves on to consider various forms of treatment. A closing section on "Living with the Illness" is practical and realistic. Appendices list resources for families and patients and summarize state commitment laws. 319 pgs.

FAMILIES & COPING STRATEGIES

ACKERMAN, Robert J., PhD

Let Go and Grow: Recovery for Adult Children, Health Communications Inc., 1987

Quote from cover: "In Let Go and Grow: Recovery for Adult Children, Dr. Ackerman, from his in-depth studies, identifies the characteristics of all adult children of alcoholics, plus the varying and diverse types. He identifies the positive characteristics and pinpoints the problem areas, so that through the process of forgiveness and understanding, the adult child, too, can achieve positive intimate relationships. From recognizing and dealing with the problem with the parent(s), the adult child can make peace within the family to let go the problems of the past, and grow into healthy adulthood. 187 pgs.

AMI of OHIO -- Religious Outreach, 1992

Just for This Day: Meditations for Families Experiencing Mental Illness, 114 pgs.

BASS, Ellen and Laura Davis

The Courage to Heal, Harper & Row, 1988

A guide for women survivors of child sexual abuse. Bass and Davis offer training seminars and educational programs about child sexual abuse and training for counselors.

BERNHEIM, Kayla, Richard Lewind, and Caroline Beale

The Caring Family: Living with Chronic Mental Illness,* Random House, 1982

A book for families with mentally ill members. It suggests ways of dealing with such issues as the ill member's undesirable behavior, overseeing treatment, using the mental health system, and solving legal problems. Includes brief sections for spouses, parents, and siblings. 226 pgs.

BRADSHAW, John

Healing the Shame that Binds You, Health Communications, 1988

Bradshaw shows us how toxic shame is the core problem in our compulsions, co-dependencies and addictions resulting in the breakdown of the family system and our inability to go forward in our life. 241 pgs.

BURCH, Claire

Stranger in the Family: A Guide to Living with the Emotionally Disturbed.* Bobbs-Merrill Co. Inc., 1972

Quote from cover: "...an innovative work on a subject which is still so controversial that any attempt to negotiate it is like picking one's way across a bed of hot coals... Out of her own long encounter, plus familiarity with most psychiatric and anti-psychiatry movements, she has written a deeply compassionate, straight forward and truly healthful book with a point of view that is filled with hope for families.233 pgs.

CALIFORNIA AMI

FAMILIES KNOW About Coping with Serious Mental Illness. Sacramento, CA, AMI 1989

An excellent book for outreach developed by the California Alliance for the Mentally Ill that can be used by any state or local affiliate. Engaging illustrations and a readable text assure readers that they are not alone. The book offers sound advice: find professional help, become involved in treatment decisions, read about mental illness, take care of yourself, cultivate coping skills, change your expectations.28 pgs.

DAVIS, Laura

The Courage to Heal Workbook. Harper & Row, 1990

For women and men survivors of child sexual abuse. 452 pgs.

DEARTH, Nona, et al,

Families Helping Families: Living with Schizophrenia. W.W. Norton & Co., 1986

Written by NAMI members to help other families cope with mentally ill members. It is direct, authoritative, and practical in dealing with a wide range of problems families face—their feelings and attitudes, relationships with professionals (take them off a pedestal), the state of services and the need for improvement. Ends by reaffirming the need for families to work together as advocates. 163 pgs.

DINNER, Sherry H., PhD

Nothing to be Ashamed Of. Lothrop, Lee and Shepard Books, 1982

This book contains chapters on: What is Mental Illness? Reactions to Living with a Mentally Ill Person, Schizophrenia, Mood Disorders, Anxiety Disorders, Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder, Alzheimer's Disease, Eating Disorders, Mental Health Professionals and What They Do, Coping, and Helping Your Family. Includes an appendix on finding a support group. 212 pgs.

FRIEL, John and Linda

Adult Children: The Secrets of Dysfunctional Families.* Health Communications, Inc., 1988

Quote from jacket cover: "It is estimated that as many as 34 million people grew up in alcoholic homes, but what about the rest of us? What about families that had no alcoholism, but did have perfectionism, workaholism, compulsive overeating, intimacy problems, depression, problems in expressing feelings, plus all the other personality traits that can produce a family system much like an alcoholic one? Countless millions of us struggle with these kinds of dysfunctions every day, and until very recently we struggled alone. Pulling together both theory and clinical practice, the two authors provide a readable explanation of what happened to us and how we can rectify it." 198 pgs.

GIL, Eliana, PhD

Outgrowing the Pain. Dell Publishing, 1988

Quote from introduction: "As a therapist, I have seen many clients who have sought help for a variety of problems including finding or keeping jobs, problems with a drinking or abusive mate, depression, general dissatisfaction with life, or a feeling of "wandering" without clear direction or goals. When I inquired into their pasts, physical, sexual, emotional abuse and/or neglect often had occurred. I began to recognize similar patterns and difficulties in victims of past or current abuse." 88 pgs.

HATFIELD, Agnes B.

Consumer Guide to Mental Health Services. Arlington, VA, NAMI, 1985

An essential beginner's handbook for families of mentally ill persons. It deals with choosing a therapist, hospitalization, community services, insurance, long-term planning, and grievances. Urges families to be assertive consumers. 17 pgs.

HATFIELD, Agnes B. PhD

Coping with Aggressive Behavior. NAMI, 1992

Booklet on violent behavior in people who have mental illness and the family's role in dealing with it. 6 pgs.

HATFIELD, Agnes B.

Coping with Mental Illness in the Family: A Family Guide, NAMI, 1991

An updated coping guide by a professional who speaks from personal experience. Addresses many of the problems families face as they try to understand mental illness and cope with the problems it raises. It offers practical suggestions for lowering stress levels, managing disturbing behavior, and using family and community resources. The book is equally appropriate for use by individual families, family study groups, or professionals. 68 pgs.

HATFIELD, Agnes B.

Families of the Mentally Ill: Meeting the Challenges, Jossey-Bass, 1987

Written for professionals by NAMI members, most of whom are themselves professionals. The book describes the anguish families suffer because of a loved one's mental illness, the history of the family movement and its empowering effect, the stigma families confront, and the humiliation they often suffer in their relations with service providers. Promising developments are family advocacy, more collaborative professional-family relationships, and advances in scientific research. 107 pgs.

HATFIELD, Agnes B.

Family Education in Mental Illness, Guilford, 1990

A must for families in educating themselves for supporting ill loved ones. 212 pgs.

HINCKLEY, Jack and JoAnn

Breaking Point, Chosen Books, 1985

The parents of John Hinckley, Jr. talk about the step-by-step process of John developing mental illness. Sections include: Early Warning Signs, Where to Turn for Help, and Do's and Don'ts for Families. 375 pgs.

JOHNSON, Julie Tallard

Hidden Victims: An 8 Stage Healing Process for Families and Friends of the Mentally Ill, Doubleday, 1988

Practical and realistic help for the "hidden victims" of mental illness -- siblings, spouses, parents, and adult children. The author urges family members to accept mental illness as they would accept any chronic illness, to limit its disruptive effect on family life, and to learn to cope with guilt and fear. She proposes an eight-stage healing process that builds self-esteem and inner peace. 190 pgs.

KANTER, Joel S.

Coping Strategies for Relatives of the Mentally Ill, Arlington, VA, NAMI, 1984

Useful for individual families or as a discussion group manual. Deals with attitudes and goals for families, planning and implementing effective coping strategies, handling aggression and intimidation, and supporting and protecting the mentally ill person. Cites the need to require that mentally ill persons respect others and take steps toward independence. 28 pgs.

KOYANAGI, Chris

Operation Help: A Mental Health Advocate's Guide to Medicaid, Alexandria, VA, National Mental Health Association, 1989

A reference tool about Medicaid designed to help advocates, but useful for families, too. The book discusses strategies for changing the system, provides a check-list of specific services that can be financed partly or entirely by Medicaid, and urges advocates to bring pressure on states to match federal Medicaid funds to improve services for mentally ill persons. Tables summarize Medicaid programs by state. 110 pgs.

KURTZ, Ernest and Katherine Ketcham

Spirituality of Imperfection, Bantam Books, 1992

"Spirituality teaches us . . . how to deal with failure in life . . . errors are part of the game, part of its rigorous truth." Kurtz uses wisdom stories from many cultures and the Twelve Step Program to share his vision and hope. A spiritual connection often comes when consumers and families tell their own stories and the truth revealed helps them to heal. 293 pgs.

LAING, R. D.

Politics of the Family, Pantheon Books, 1969

Chapter 1: The Family and the "Family". Chapter 2: Intervention in Social Situations. Chapter 3: The Study of Family and Social Contexts in Relation to Schizophrenia. Quote from the book jacket: "The first chapter was originally addressed to psychoanalysts, the second to social workers, the third to psychiatrists. The remaining chapters comprise five talks given on Canadian Radio. Each has been much revised and the resulting volume, written in a simple and lucid style, is of concern to anyone who wishes to consider what it is like to live in a family." 133 pgs.

LOW, Abraham A.

Mental Health Through Will Training, Christopher Publishing House, 1971

A system of self-help in psychotherapy as practiced by Recovery Incorporated. 393 pgs.

MARSH, Diane T.

Families and Mental Illness: New Directions in Professional Practice, Praeger Publishers, 1992

Toxic Psychiatry, St. Martin's Press, NY 1991

Why therapy, empathy and love must replace the drugs, electroshock and biochemical theories of the "new psychiatry." Controversial material for objective reading. 410 pgs.

BUSICK, Bonnie and M. Gorman

Ill Not Insane, New Idea Press, 1986

A forceful and crusading statement on the biochemical basis of mental illnesses written by NAMI members. They provide detailed, technical information about the physiology of the brain and brain disorders, argue for legal procedures based on a medical model, and urge extensive physiological testing in diagnosing mental illness to rule out other illnesses that produce psychiatric inaccuracies. Helpful diagrams and tables. 298 pgs.

ELLIS, Albert, PhD and Robert A. Harper, PhD

A New Guide to Rational Living, Melvin Power Wilshire Book Company, 1975

Quote from foreword by Melvin Powers, Publisher: "...This book, like no other you have read, employs none of the jargon usually associated with psychology or psychiatry, and it may well prove the best book on psychotherapy for laymen ever written. It can provide emotionally disturbed individuals with many answers they seek..." 244 pgs.

ESTROFF, Sue E.

Making it Crazy: An Ethnography of Psychiatric Clients in an American Community, University of California Press, 1981

Quote from foreword by J. Richard Lamb, MD, Associate Professor of Psychiatry, USC School of Medicine: "In an era of rhetoric about deinstitutionalization, it is refreshing to have solid clinical data from a perceptive observer who does not have a vested interest in this matter, that is, one who is neither mental health professional, nor patient, nor union official, nor legislator. Amid the heated discussions about the advantages and benefits or the problems and scandals of the mentally ill living in the community, the kind of objective information provided by this book is essential." 328 pgs.

GENDLIN, Eugene T.

Focusing, Bantam Books, 1978

Quote from jacket cover: "Based on research at the University of Chicago, focusing is a new technique of self therapy that teaches you to identify and change the way your personal problems concretely exist in your body... Focusing guides you to the deepest level of awareness within your body. It is on this level, unfamiliar to most people, that unresolved problems actually exist, and only on this level can they change." 174 pgs.

NIMH

Primary Prevention in Mental Health: An Annotated Bibliography, NIMH, 1985

Quoted from foreword by Stephen E. Goldston, EdD, MSPH, Director, Office of Prevention NIMH and Senior Editor, Prevention Publication Series: "An oft-expressed frustration of prevention advocates, researchers, practitioners and academicians has been the difficulty in identifying and accessing relevant primary prevention literature... One apparent way to deal with the difficulty in locating primary prevention reference material is to compile and distribute to the field an extensive bibliography on the subject. This carefully crafted, annotated bibliography, presenting the literature in an orderly, systematic fashion, genuinely fulfills this recognized need. It covers a wide range of issues, programs, debates, and perspectives on primary prevention." 425 pgs.

O'SHEA, Mary Hepburn

Come Live With Me, Published by the Author, 1974

Quote from introduction: "If anyone is looking for a literary, scholarly book, this is not it! It is intended to be a simple book which expresses complex social issues in terms of feelings in a way, hopefully, anyone can understand. It's a book about people who have been in institutions and returned to the community. It's a book about agencies and how they use the bureaucratic procedures to find reasons they cannot do things. It's a book about community caretakers who live day to day with people who face the problems but can't find their way through 'the system'." 146 pgs.

The Broken Brain: The Biological Revolution in Psychiatry, Harper & Row, 1984

An excellent, comprehensive explanation of advances in brain research and their impact on understanding and treating mental illness. The book is clearly organized and written; even technical explanations are understandable. The single best book available about state of the art psychiatry in the 1980's. 278 pgs.

BLOOM, Bernard

Stressful Life Event Theory and Research: Implications for Primary Prevention, NIMH, 1985

Quote from foreword by Stephen E. Goldston, EdD, MSPH, Director, Office of Prevention, NIMH: "Stressful life events and their effects on well-being have emerged over the past two decades as fruitful lines of inquiry. Although what we now call stress has long been recognized as a percipient of mental disorders, research into stressful life events has developed into a field of study only recently. Knowledge has expanded to the point where it can significantly improve intervention strategies that may prevent mental and physical illness. Thus, a review of the theory and research of stressful life events is timely." 110 pgs.

BOURICIUS, Jean K.,

Psychoactive Drugs and Their Effects on Mentally Ill Persons, Arlington, VA NAMI, 1989

DONALDSON, Kenneth
Insanity Inside Out, Crown Publishers, Inc., 1976

Quote from jacket cover: "A tragic story of wasted years... yet also a brave and useful one. For Ken Donaldson is an American hero, the principal in a landmark Supreme Court case which ascertains the right to freedom for tens of thousands of involuntary mental patients. Perhaps the most important ruling on mental patient's rights in the history of the nation, the Donaldson Case promises to restructure our incarcerative mental health system." 338 pgs.

DOWLING, Colette
You Mean I Don't Have to Feel This Way? Charles Scribner's Sons, New York, 1991

This book was prompted by the author's experience with her daughter who was bulimic and depressed, eventually diagnosed and successfully treated. Dowling explores the idea that there is a relationship between depression and other disorders such as bulimia, obsessive-compulsive disorder and even addiction. 293 pgs.

DUKE, Patty and Kenneth Turan
Call Me Anna, Bantam Books, 1987

The autobiography of Patty Duke; actress, wife, mother, manic depressive, mental health advocate. 311 pgs.

FLACH, Frederick, MD
Rickie, Ballantine Books, 1990

Author traces a 10 year hopeless round of failed treatment for his daughter diagnosed with schizophrenia. Eventually Rickie was cured by visual perception and orthomolecular treatment. The cure raises questions about the correctness of the original diagnosis. AMI families must guard against the false hope this book may raise. 276 pgs.

FURLONG, Pat Adams
Giving Voice (Poetry), Knox AMI, TN, 1992

HOWLAND, Bette
W-3, Viking Press, 1974

Quote from jacket cover by Saul Bellow: "I was much moved by W-3. It is admirably straight and thoughtful, tough minded but full of powerful feeling. The patients of W-3, black and white, men and women, dizzy, endearing, suicidal, doomed, come to us from these pages not as case studies but as our own brothers and sisters. No poses are struck and no vain gestures made in this brave and honorable book. Bette Howland is a real writer." 206 pgs.

JOHNSON COUNTY COMMUNITY COLLEGE,
Kansas

Breakthrough: An Experience in Human Growth
(Poetry) The Mental Health Association of Johnson County, 1972 .

Quote from introduction: "Not long ago some interested persons of Johnson County got together to form the organization known as Breakthrough -- a community-based group which strives to provide an atmosphere where people, especially persons returning home from mental hospitals, can grow emotionally. The poems in this publication represent the efforts of members of Breakthrough searching for a deeper meaning in life for themselves and others.
They have tried to put into words, more importantly,
to share their thoughts and experiences, with others through writing poetry." 73 pgs.

KNAUTH, Percy

A Season in Hell* Harper & Row, 1975

Quote from jacket by Gerridee Wheeler, President, National Association for Mental Health: "Written across the pages of A Season in Hell is the courageous story of victory over one of our oldest ills, depression. Percy Knauth's message of hope is for everyone. For the Mental Health Association, his victory and the telling of it represent another demonstration that the fight against mental illness is being won. We feel fortunate that Mr. Knauth, a former editor of LIFE magazine, is serving as our National Mental Health Chairman. In that capacity and through this book, he provides inspiration to countless thousands who seek hope and help." 111 pgs.

LEAR, Frances

The Second Seduction, Alfred Knopf, New York, 1992

Founding editor-in-chief of Lear's Magazine, Frances Lear has come to symbolize the success story of the American career woman. Her courageous memoir speaks of dark forces that have shaped her being: alcoholism, the memory of abuse, a loss of personal identity, manic depressive illness, and the ever-present possibility of suicide. Amazingly, she has prevailed. 191 pgs.

McNAMER, Deirdre

Rima in the Weeds, Harper Perennial, 1992

FICTION: How a family copes in a small Montana town when a daughter returns with an unexpected child and finds her mother struggling with a

NAMI

Experiences of Patients and Families: First Person
Accounts, Arlington, VA, NAMI, 1989

A collection of short accounts by patients and family members of their experiences with schizophrenia. Fifteen are from Schizophrenia Bulletin, two are from the New York Times. The accounts illustrate the range and complexity of the disease and enhance the understanding of patients, family members, and professionals. 83 pgs.

NEUFELD, John

Lisa, Bright and Dark, Signet, 1970

FICTION: Quote from the title page: "A cry for help. Her parents won't listen. Her teachers are afraid to interfere. For Lisa Shilling, whose 'bright' days as a happy high school girl grow rarer and whose 'dark' days of despair descend more often, there are three friends with hope, love, and a plan for 'therapy'.
Teenagers practicing amateur psychiatry might be dangerous business, but what was the alternative?" 143 pgs.

SHEEHAN, Susan

Is There No Place On Earth for Me?* Vintage Books, 1983

A book by a journalist that is both a detailed account of a woman with schizophrenia and a general description of mental illness and its treatment. The author portrays in realistic and unrelenting terms the mediocrity of hospitalization and the failure of the community to provide appropriate care. Well researched and based on interviews and extended observations, the book is both an indictment of the system and a humane portrait of a deeply troubled yet spirited woman. This book won the Pulitzer Prize for non-fiction in 1982. 333 pgs.

SHETLER, Harriet and Peggy Straw, Editors
A New Day: Voices From Across the Land, Arlington, VA, NAMI, 1982

SMITH, Nancy Covert
Journey Out of Nowhere,* Word Books, Publisher, 1973

Quote from jacket cover: "...Based on her own frightening experience, Nancy can give real and practical answers to a great many questions about mental illness -- most especially how important is the behavior of the people around a patient who is trying to re-enter society. The need for that kind of education is obvious, as borne out by Mental Health Association statistics that two out of three patients are returned to the hospital after release." 124 pgs.

STEBEL, S.L.
The Shoe Leather Treatment: The Bill Thomas Story, J.P. Tarcher, 1980

Bill Thomas' story. Quote from jacket cover: "...Thomas finds himself remanded by the court to a maximum-security state hospital for the criminally insane. He soon learns that it is an institution from which no one ever leaves, where patients are forced to live like animals, where sexual abuses are condoned, where human cockfights are staged by guards for their own amusement, and where the shoe leather treatment — brutal kickings and beatings by groups of guards — is the only therapy patients ever receive." 350 pgs.

STUART, Sara
Men in Trouble, Harper Collins, 1988

A fictional account of a bright and adventurous New England family who suffer the disruptive influences of mental illness. The fact that some families have a predisposition to certain psychiatric diseases is dealt with. No fairy tale here. The reader relates. 290 pgs.

STYRON, William.
Darkness Visible: A Memoir of Madness, Random House, 1990

Personal account by one of America's foremost authors. 84 pgs.

SWADOS, Elizabeth
The Four of Us, Farrar, Straus and Giroux, 1991

The well-known writer/composer in the American theatre and an author of children's books, Swados tells the story of her creative family's struggle to understand and accept the mental illnesses that plagued both her brother and mother, but also the gifts passed on to her because they were part of her world. 243 pgs.

WESCHLER, James A.
In a Darkness, W.W. Norton & Co., 1972, 1988

An account by a distinguished journalist of his son's schizophrenia and the family's anguish from the onset of the illness in the early 1960's to the son's suicide in 1969. The author traces frustrating relationships with eight psychiatrists and five mental hospitals, recurring crisis, and gathering hopelessness. He pays tribute to his son's valiant struggle. A heart-breaking, insightful book that was a "first" at the time of its publication in 1972. Unfortunately, many of the practices in diagnosis and treatment described in the book still persisted when the book was reprinted in 1988. 160 pgs.

WILSON, Louise
This Stranger, My Son, G.P. Putnam's Sons, 1968

Quote from jacket cover: "An inspiring account of a mother's determined struggle to raise a child 'lost' to her through illness. Mrs. Wilson's heroic efforts to save her son, victim of paranoid schizophrenia, are bound to strike a chord in the heart of any parent who has tried to move heaven and earth out of love for his child."

WINGARD, Bill
Sickness, Sanity, Counterfeits and Cures, 1983

Autobiography of a recovered schizophrenic. 86 pgs.

CHAMBERLIN, Judy

On Our Own. McGraw-Hill Book Co., 1978

Quote from book jacket: "In the forefront of a new movement to provide alternatives to the established mental health system, Judy Chamberlin describes how patients themselves are developing humane and effective methods of treating the "mentally ill". A former mental patient and a member of the President's Commission on Mental Health, Ms. Chamberlin draws on her own experiences and those of others to describe in shocking detail how traditional mental hospitals foster alienation and dependency in patients while ignoring and over-medicating them. 236 pgs.

IDAHO COMMUNITY SUPPORT PROGRAM Alternatives: A Self-Help Guide for Idaho's Mentally Ill and Their Families. Idaho Community Support Project, January, 1986

Quote from preface: "...Now the professional community has come to recognize what the families have known all along -- that they are a vital part of the treatment team and need to be included in the decision making and planning regarding their relative." 87 pgs.

LEVINE, Irene

Developing Community Support Programs: A Resource Manual for Families. Arlington, VA, NAMI and the Center for Rehabilitation, Research, and Training in Mental Health, Boston University

The report of a survey of NAMI families in 1983 to find out about the community programs and services they were organizing and operating. After addressing questions about the advisability of service delivery involvement, the study describes 24 such programs -- housing, psychosocial rehabilitation, and vocational rehabilitation. Although the descriptions are dated, the underlying ideas continue to be helpful to groups that are considering starting programs. 108 pgs.

STROUL, Beth A., MEd

Models of Community Support Services: Approaches to Helping Persons with Long-Term Mental Illness, NIMH, 1986

Quote from introduction: "This monograph represents one of CSP's many technical assistance efforts, and it is intended as a technical assistance tool for states and communities interested in improving services for persons with long-term mental illness. The major objective of the monograph is to synthesize, into a single document, the wealth of available information on a number of different approaches to providing community support services. Five distinctive models of community support are described. The monograph responds to a frequently expressed need from the field for a concise, useful description of the key elements of each model type. 81 pgs.

UHLORN, Bill

Creating a Caring Community: Developing Housing for Persons with Mental Illness, Arlington, VA, NAMI, 1980, Third Printing 1987

TORREY, E. Fuller

Nowhere To Go: The Tragic Odyssey of the Homeless Mentally Ill, Harper & Row, Rev. 1989

A forceful history of the failure of deinstitution-alization of mentally ill persons. Dr. Torrey traces the ideas that underlay the formation of community mental health centers, ideas that were abandoned in practice. Patients released from hospitals have rarely received aftercare or found housing or rehabilitation programs. Little wonder that they make up 30 percent of the homeless. Dr. Torrey charges that "the care of the seriously mentally ill in 20th century America has been a public disgrace." 256 pgs.
